Confucius Institute of the State of Washington

The Confucius Institute of the State of Washington is the first statewide Confucius Institute. It is a joint effort of the Office of the Chinese Language Council International (Hanban) in Beijing and the University of Washington, Seattle Public Schools, and the Alliance for Education (serving as fiscal agent) in Washington State, in partnership with the Office of the Governor and the Office of Superintendent of Public Instruction. It was established under an agreement signed in China on September 11, 2009 and an honorific Memorandum of Understanding signed at the University of Washington on April 26, 2010 by Governor Chris Gregoire, Superintendent of Seattle Public Schools Maria Goodloe-Johnson, University of Washington Provost Phyllis Wise, and Director-General of Hanban Madame Xu Lin, shown in the picture below. The official partner institutions in China are Sichuan University and Chongqing Municipal Education Commission.

Strengthening Washington–China Relationship

Washington State has had long and close ties with China. The first ship after the opening of relations came to the Port of Seattle in 1979. On a per capita basis, Washington trades more with China than any other state. China is the largest trading partner through Washington ports, one of the largest sources of international students at our educational institutions, and the second-largest agricultural export market with exports of over $1 billion. In other words, across nearly all categories of interaction, China is a huge partner for our region.

Confucius Institute Education Center

Housed at Chief Sealth International High School in Seattle Public Schools, the Confucius Institute Education Center provides a space dedicated to Chinese language and culture. The Education Center is open to teachers, students, and the public in the afternoon during the week and for evening classes and workshops, as well as language classes, workshops, and cultural programs on many weekends. It also provides space for the Confucius Institute Library for resources for loan and distribution.
